The book begins with an overview of psychological profiling and its history. Canter then discusses the different types of criminals and their psychological characteristics. He also covers the various methods used to create psychological profiles, including crime scene analysis, victim and witness interviews, and offender databases.

The second half of the book presents a series of case studies that illustrate the application of psychological profiling in real-world investigations. These cases include the Yorkshire Ripper murders, the Green River Killer case, and the Unabomber case. Canter provides a detailed analysis of each case, showing how psychological profiling was used to identify and apprehend the offenders.

The Forensic Psychologists Casebook is an essential resource for anyone interested in psychological profiling and criminal investigation. It is a must-read for law enforcement officers, forensic psychologists, and anyone else who wants to understand the minds of criminals and how they can be caught.
