Napoleon's Return from Exile

After his defeat at Waterloo in 1814, Napoleon was exiled to the island of Elba. However, his exile was short-lived. In March 1815, he escaped and returned to France, where he was greeted as a hero. The Bourbon monarchy, which had been restored after Napoleon's first abdication, was overthrown, and Napoleon reassumed power as Emperor of France.

The Seventh Coalition

Napoleon's return alarmed the Allied powers, who quickly formed the Seventh Coalition to oppose him. Led by the Duke of Wellington and Field

Marshal Blücher, the Coalition armies consisted of British, Prussian, Austrian, and Russian troops.

The Waterloo Campaign

The Waterloo campaign was a series of intense battles fought in Belgium in June 1815. Napoleon attempted to defeat the Allied armies in detail, but his plans were thwarted by the intelligence and skill of Wellington and Blücher.

The Battle of Waterloo, fought on June 18, 1815, was the decisive battle of the campaign. Napoleon's army was routed, and he was forced to abdicate once again. He was exiled to the remote island of Saint Helena, where he died in 1821.

The Legacy of the Campaign

The Campaign of 1815 ended Napoleon's reign and brought about a period of relative peace in Europe. The Allied powers established a new Free Download, known as the Concert of Europe, which aimed to prevent future conflicts and maintain the balance of power.
